Good Governance, Financing of Infrastructure for Effective Delivery of Public Services

The Programme

Rapidly developing and industrializing countries throughout the world pose a challenge for their national, provincial and local leaders and development managers to keep pace with the provision of adequate public services.

While lack of funds is often discussed as the main constraint for the poor state of public services, international experience suggests that more often than not, lack of effective leadership, planning, management and capacity to mobilize resources, formulate and implement good projects are the main contributing factors. In mobilizing financial and managerial resources to implement projects, institutional capacity building and HRD, and public private partnership play a significant role in provision and delivery of public services. This programme focuses on these factors and examines the lessons learnt in the countries to be visited.

Source of Funding

Applicants and their departments should find their own sources of funding, either from their governments or through funding agencies such as bilateral or multilateral agencies. Kindly note that 90% of our participants are funded by their own governments or departments. The other 10% have received sponsorship from international agencies. In the past, funding agencies such as UNDP, World Bank, DFID, CIDA, SIDA, AUSAID, GTZ and ADB have sponsored some participants. The success in securing sponsorship depends on your own working relationship with these agencies. It should be noted that obtaining sponsorship is competitive and applicants should therefore apply to more than one agency and followup properly in order to increase their chances of being successful.
